WOMEN'S RIGHTS UNDER ATTACK

Leave it to the GOP to not only stymie continued progress, but slam-shift the country into reverse and head back to the good ole days, when women were forced to put their lives at risk with coat hangers and back-alley quacks to deal with an unwanted pregnancy. Recent Republican antiabortion laws are more than just an effort to impose new restrictions in some states; they comprise an all-out assault to make abortion illegal everywhere.

In May Alabama passed the strictest antiabortion law yet, with no exceptions even for rape and incest. Alabama state representative Terri Collins admitted the larger goal is to "get this case in front of the Supreme Court so Roe v. Wade can be overturned." The knuckle-draggers are emboldened now with a conservative majority on the Supreme Court, so they're storming the barricades. Similar laws have been passed or introduced in Georgia, Kentucky, Missouri, Mississippi, Texas and Utah.

It's mainly the oh-so-Godly Christian right opposed to choice, supposedly because Jesus Christ mandated it, but there's nothing in the Bible about abortion. They say we are a Christian nation, but we're more than that. Our heritage goes back to the law and political structures founded by ancient Greece and Rome, where abortion was widely practiced. Actually, abortion has been practiced in most cultures throughout human history. The Supreme Court Justices who wrote Roe v. Wade studied its history before rendering their decision, and the judgment became a crucial cornerstone of the equal rights movement for women.

Behind the Bible-thumpers' obsession about an incarnated soul being snuffed out, there's the prudery—abortion enables more recreational sex instead of just for procreation. Do we really need to "be fruitful and multiply" on this overstressed planet? Bringing an unwanted child into the world at any time is not a good thing, but in a world already vastly overpopulated and straining natural resources to the limit?

We must support progressive groups like the ACLU, MoveOn and NARAL Pro-Choice America—organizations that are fighting back with #StoptheBans protests and proposed boycotts of states passing the most restrictive laws. In a full-page New York Times ad, 180 CEOs signed off on a statement urging all companies to stand up for women's reproductive rights—not just because it's the right thing to do, but because the new restrictions are also bad for business, hampering the ability to attract talented women in the workforce.

For states that pass these archaic laws, there will be an economic penalty to pay. Let's make sure they do pay it, because without this fight, women will lose their reproductive rights—they will lose the right to make life-changing decisions for themselves. And the inevitable return to the dangerous, horrific practices of pre-Roe is wholly unacceptable. So put your pocketbook where your convictions are. Pro choice or no choice. You decide.

IS PEACE POSSIBLE?

THE MIDDLE EAST HAS BEEN A HORNET'S NEST FOR EONS. NOW DONALD TRUMP CAN CHOOSE TO START A WAR THERE OR EASE TENSIONS.

Trust me, this column about the threat of the United States and Iran going to war will be relevant no matter what happens between the moment I finish writing this first sentence to the column's publication or even republication years from now. What I have to say will be relevant whether President Donald Trump has made good on his threat to obliterate Iran or—as he astonishingly hinted he was considering just hours later—would strive to defuse tensions by negotiating with the Islamic republic.

War looming on the horizon is nothing new, folks. Since the conclusion of World War II, diplomatic relations between the United States and Iran have been on a nutty roller-coaster ride. Daredevil Trump is just the latest U.S. President forced to make pivotal foreign-policy decisions involving Iran.

Harry Truman first dragged Iran into America's Cold War chicanery with his doctrine to contain the Soviet Union's geopolitical ambitions in the Middle East. Jimmy Carter was Prez when disciples of Ayatollah Khomeini—Iran's leader after the monarchy was overthrown—held 52 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy for 444 days. And there's Barack Obama, who helped engineer the skittish, multinational nuclear arms agreement with Iran. (Seeking to impose stiffer sanctions, Trump has since pulled the U.S. out of the deal.)

One of my favorite Presidents, Dwight D. Eisenhower, made the dumbest decision regarding Iran. In 1953 he endorsed the CIA's covert overthrow of Prime Minister Mohammad Mossaddegh, the only democratically elected and secular leader that Iran has ever known. Taking charge again was the Shah of Iran, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who was convinced that he ruled by the power of divine intervention rather than the dictates of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company in the days before it assumed its current name, BP. The British government and the CIA were convinced that Mossaddegh's intent to nationalize the company was part of a Soviet-backed communist plot.

So much for the autocratic shah's divine intervention abetted by the CIA. An apparently even higher power brought an exiled Shiite cleric to power, the aforementioned Ayatollah Khomeini, in 1979. He died ten years later, but the Islamic Republic of Iran has lasted for four decades despite U.S. efforts to undermine it.

The White House's dumbest manifestation of anti-Iran hysteria was George W. Bush's irrational response to the 9/11 terrorist attacks. Although the 19 hijackers were primarily from Saudi Arabia, Bush ordered the invasion of the royal kingdom's archenemy, neighboring Iraq. Its ruler, Saddam Hussein, ran a basically secular dictatorship that had nothing to do with 9/11. The deeply ironic result was that the eventual overthrow of Hussein brought to power Iraq's long-suppressed Shiite majority, including pro-Iranian Iraqis who had been living in exile among their Shia brethren in Iran.

The Middle East has been in turmoil ever since, with an already unstable rivalry between Sunni and Shiite Muslims raised to a full-scale sectarian conflict. And let's not forget most Islamic nations' animosity toward Israel.

Displaying his uniquely bizarre arrogance, Trump now boasts that he can deliver a grand peace deal for the incendiary Middle East. Or, when his mood abruptly shifts, the mother of all wars.

But it's not only Trump's arrogance that has brought us to this point. The clashes between religions and their flocks have been brewing for much of human history. Of course, the Middle East is today's most turbulent cauldron of religious confrontation.

What was often ignored, however, is that the United States is a vital component of this theological havoc. But Trump's wild antics made us confront the madness of our own country's prolonged involvement in the region.

With his energized fundamentalist Christian base allied so oddly with Israel's territorial expansion, Trump has realigned the ever-expanding American empire with the passion, hubris and irrationality of Christendom's medieval Crusades. His electoral base believes that mayhem and suffering in the Promised Land are essential to the Second Coming of Jesus Christ.

So there you have it, the prescription for the ultimate death and destruction of civilization. But don't blame it on any of the religions' adherents—or the deities for whom they claim to speak—when these crazy warring factions refuse to compromise with a supposedly devil-supported enemy. Since ancient times the Middle East has been a battle zone strewn with horrid carnage, ordered by zealots who appropriate religion in its worst divisive aspects while shunning even the faintest ray of the unifying enlightenment enshrined in humanity's most cherished scriptures.

“I can’t believe how many idiots think the Earth is flat.
Then I remember who’s President and all the fucking morons who voted for him, and it all makes sense.”

WHERE DEMOCRACY GOES TO DIE

JIM CROW RISES FROM THE ASHES IN FLORIDA EVEN AFTER A HUGE MAJORITY VOTED TO KILL THE DIRTY BIRD.

In the March 2019 issue my counterpart Robert Scheer trumpeted unabashedly "good news": Nearly 65% of Florida voters from the left, right and center said yes to a November 2018 ballot initiative "to amend their state constitution, restoring voting rights to felons after completing all terms of their sentences, except for those convicted of murder or a felony sexual offense."

It was, as Scheer accurately touted, a "pure bright light of decency and common sense" from voters in one of a bitterly divided nation's most deeply divided states. Florida Amendment 4—the Voting Rights Restoration for Felons Initiative—was supported by advocates as diverse as the Koch brothers, the ACLU, the NAACP and right-wing Christian groups, not to mention former felons. They led the campaign to put the initiative on the ballot even though none of them could vote for or against it. In January 2019 the state's new constitutional amendment kicked in, allowing disenfranchised felons to register to vote in the Sunshine State for the first time in more than 150 years.

Following the abolition of slavery, Florida was forced to grant the right to vote to freed slaves. Meanwhile it took steps to restrict freedoms for African Americans, most notably in 1868, when the state constitution enacted a ban on voting for felons even after completing parole and probation, disproportionately impacting African Americans.

The fall of Florida's shameful lifetime ban on felons' voting rights was, as Scheer described, a "huge civil rights victory" and "sudden emancipation proclamation for nearly 1.5 million Floridians, 21% of them African-American, who paid their debt to society, but were denied the right to vote."

Thousands of the re-enfranchised quickly began registering so they could finally have their voices heard in a representative democracy. "Now I feel like a part of society," 61-year-old Clarence Office Jr. told The New York Times. Out of prison for more than a decade, the former drug addict has been pursuing a master's degree while working for the Department of Veterans Affairs in Miami. "I wanted to voice my opinion," Office added, "but I couldn't. It didn't matter what I felt. Now it does."

Karen L. Leicht, who served a 28-month sentence for conspiracy to commit insurance fraud, described those who have served their time as "returning citizens." There are a lot of them in Florida, she noted, since "any crime over $300 is a felony" in the state.

"Improbable as it seems," Scheer celebrated, "if that many sensible voters in Florida are ready to risk treading the course of compassionate justice, maybe America can indeed become great again." Robert, however, may have been too optimistic.

Despite the landslide approval of Amendment 4, Florida voters—on the very same ballot and by a razor-thin margin—elected former Republican U.S. Representative Ron DeSantis to succeed term-limited Governor Rick Scott. In a similarly close race, Scott unseated the incumbent Democrat, ensuring that both of Florida's U.S. Senate seats are filled by Republicans. The GOP also maintained control of both chambers of the state legislature.

The GOP immediately went to work to undermine the will of the electorate with a bill that guts Amendment 4. Lawmakers in Tallahassee enacted a voter-suppression provision to keep as many of those potential new voters as possible away from the polls. House Bill 7066 requires all Floridians with felony convictions to pay off all "court fees, fines and restitution" before they are allowed to vote.

Patrick Penn, who spent 15 years in prison for robbery and has no idea if he owes money, lashed out to the Times: "Basically, they're telling you, 'If you have money, you can vote. If you don't have money, you can't,' That's not what the people voted for."

Ion Sancho, who served as Leon County, Florida's elections supervisor for 28 years, told me, "What the Republicans did was reprehensible. The overwhelming, clear language of [Amendment 4] refers to completing your sentence, probation and parole.… Fees were not mentioned at all."

Critics charge that the provision amounts to little more than an unconstitutional poll tax. Court fines and fees can be can substantial and particularly onerous for those unable to work during years of incarceration.

"Florida has, in many ways, been the incubator of many things, including 'cash register justice,'" Sancho explained. "Instead of the state trying to pay for the criminal justice system, they put massive fines upon the conviction on individuals. If you have to go to the infirmary for medical care, you're charged. Drug-testing that you have to do, you're charged, and these charges can add up to hundreds of thousands of dollars" by the time a prisoner is released. Sancho cited one woman who told him she found herself with a $59-million judgment against her. "I'll never be able to vote ever in my life," she said.

Sancho, arguably Florida's most well-respected veteran election official, pointed out, "The state doesn't know who owes fines or not, so they have to set up this elaborate process. It's going to cost millions of dollars…but they'll get exactly what they want. That is, they're going to limit the impact of Amendment 4 and not restore citizens' rights to vote."

Voting rights groups that fought to adopt Amendment 4 have vowed to file legal challenges, which the state will have to pay millions more to defend. "This is clearly restricting the right to vote based upon who can afford to pay," Sancho decried. "Jim Crow has been reestablished in Florida."

JACK DORSEY

When Twitter entered the online universe in 2006, it was widely panned as a joke. How much thoughtful content, really, could anyone express in a mere 140 characters? It seemed to be designed for complete idiots incapable of composing more than two sentences without brain strain. Twitter was made for twits. Conan O'Brien had a regular comedy segment called "Twitter Tracker," ridiculing it. And the early Twitter site was notorious for crashing—the electric grid in a banana republic jungle village was more reliable.

Now, of course, all that has changed. Twitter is a global platform, a communication medium rivaling TV. Twitter's power to affect the political landscape first became apparent in the 2009 Iranian presidential election, when thousands of Iranians took to the streets to protest the fishy reelection of Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. The Iranian government blocked text messaging and the satellite feeds of foreign news organizations. But the protesters did an end run around the censorship, using Twitter to post live updates and organize demonstrations. In support, the U.S. State Department even begged Twitter's executives to postpone a scheduled maintenance downtime, so that the Iranian rebels could continue communicating without interruption. Hooray for Twitter! It has the power to change the world—but not always for the better.

Twitter has become a monster force, amplifying every voice, sane or insane, in the world, including the murderous ISIS jihadists (17.4 million tweets) and homegrown neo-Nazis advocating "racial cleansing" in the United States. Following Facebook and Google, the head of Twitter, Jack Dorsey, started banning accounts judged to be "violent and extremist," along with the Daily Stormer and Alex Jones. Brenton Tarrant, the asshole who massacred 51 people at the Christchurch mosque in New Zealand, was a Twitterhead, posting photos of his guns and links to his Mein Kampf-style manifesto. But many nonviolent, nonextremist Republicans and conservatives got swept up in the dragnet, according to a study by Vice News. They complained, and some were reinstated. Meanwhile, the white nationalist iceberg on Twitter is still thriving, with accounts actively fuming about murdering journalists and minorities.

And just like the other tech giants (Google, Facebook and Apple), Twitter has been investigated and sued for violating the Electronic Communications Piracy Act in the U.S. and other regulations abroad. An American suit in 2015 sought class-action relief for Twitter "surreptitiously [eavesdropping] on its users' private direct message communications," and even altering the message, replacing embedded hyperlinks with its own preferred links. In Ireland, where the country's Data Protection Commissioner is the lead internet regulator for the E.U., an investigation was launched for Twitter's failure to render timely notification of a major data breach.

Management is ultimately responsible for the tech giants' rotten behavior. Unfortunately, Twitter's cofounder and current CEO, Jack Dorsey, is a total freakazoid. Visiting his parents over one Thanksgiving, his mother was shocked. "You're orange. Your skin is orange. Your eyes are orange. Your hair is orange," she said. He was overdosing on beta carotene supplements.

He eats only one meal each weekday and fasts the whole weekend, consuming nothing but water. Critics estimate that he is digesting an average of less than 1,000 calories per day, while the USDA recommends between 2,000 and 3,000 calories daily for the average adult male. We know what happens to people on such a scrappy diet from the Minnesota Starvation Experiment conducted during WWII (to determine how best to cope with all the malnourished refugees in Europe). The men in the experiment, on a reduced diet like Dorsey's, suffered dizziness, exhaustion, muscle soreness, hair loss, reduced coordination, ringing in the ears and became "increasingly irritable and impatient with one another." The man is starving himself like an anorexic fashion model; unsurprising, as that's exactly how he made his living in his younger days.

Dorsey complements his concentration-camp diet with more masochism: hot saunas and ice baths. After 15 minutes boiling in his barrel sauna set at 220 degrees, he plunges into an ice bath at 37 degrees for three minutes. This is the same hot-cold torture used by Klaus Barbie and the Gestapo to extract information from French Resistance prisoners.

Not that we're dissing alternative lifestyles. Hey, if it revs your motor, redline with it. But the problem with Dorsey is that all this self-absorbed, hi-tech hipster shit sets a bad example for many who worship him as another god in the Silicon Valley pantheon and want to emulate his success. He's been called the male Gwyneth Paltrow, pushing his own Goop for Guys quackery. If I gargle iguana blood and ram Popsicles up my ass, maybe I'll become a famous billionaire too! It's like a weird, secular form of prosperity gospel. And it's giving Dorsey a serious case of mental cataracts.

While once-vanquished diseases are spreading throughout our school systems because anti-vax loons refuse to inoculate their kids, Dorsey endorsed a podcast by anti-vax author Ben Greenfield. Then in 2018 he went on a ten-day Vipassana retreat in the troubled nation of Myanmar. Vipassana is Buddhist meditation: sensory deprivation for days, locked alone in a room, no computer, phone, TV, radio, talking or listening. Total silence. Mental starvation. If he had been listening to the news, Dorsey might have known that the Myanmar government was busy murdering over 10,000 Rohingya Muslims and forcing 700,000 more to flee into Bangladesh and India. A U.N. mission found the Myanmar military guilty of "killing indiscriminately, gang-raping women, assaulting children, burning entire villages, imprisonments, enforced disappearances, torture and sexual slavery." But clearly Dorsey was oblivious as he tweeted to his 4 million followers, "The people are full of joy and the food is amazing!" Derek Zoolander couldn't have done it any dumber.

Back in the office, he's somewhat less out to lunch, but perhaps still not engaged enough. It looks like Jack's algorithm purges can't distinguish between mainstream conservatives and the radical Klan types—maybe because they've grown ever closer since the election of…Trump. Would this clown be anywhere near the White House without Twitter? Would he still be able to bamboozle all his loyal sheep without it? Doubtful. In April orange Jack met orange Donald in the Oval Office. Trump summoned him to complain about some of his Twitter followers being banned or shadow-banned. Jack promised to fix it, probably by "tweaking the algorithms." But policing free speech is always going to be a dicey job, especially on this scale, with relatively dumb machines doing the job. It seems a lot of babies get tossed out with the bathwater under any kind of censorship program. In fact, Trump's success might be the biggest indictment of Twitter as a medium—it's a giant megaphone for shallow sound bites with no room for evidence, reasoned argument, context or real thought. Maybe it really is mainly for twits. It seems to have been created by one.

To be fair, Dorsey is not a total dick. He donates to Democratic candidates and in 2015 donated one third of his Twitter shares to employees. He's really more of a clueless navel-gazer who might be better served by an occasional good meal or bottle of Scotch instead of his Gestapo torture routine. But meditating in the middle of a genocide, then raving about the experience? That justly earns him this month's Asshole award. H

THE BIGGEST LITTLE EARNER

Former Beaver Hunt babe Alice Little may appear diminutive in size, but the larger-than-life sex worker is a big earner who makes a tidy living in Nevada, where brothels are legal. Starting rate: $2,000.

In an article for the Huffington Post, Alice describes herself as a regular gal who chose sex work. And don't you dare assume she just lies on her back collecting money—Alice clocks an average of 60 to 80 hours a week, which is pretty much double the time most working stiffs are able to muster.

To clarify, in addition to her Moonlite BunnyRanch gig, Alice is also a sex educator and busies herself writing informative articles and posting to her YouTube channel, while still finding time to host a podcast (Coffee With Alice).

So exactly how much is Alice pulling down? She explains it all in a 2018 interview with Refinery 29. Notably, her "Million-Dollar Sex Work Business Plan" enabled her to hire an assistant at $40K a year. As to her million-dollar idea, the math is sound: "A million dollars divided by 12 became a goal of $84,000 a month. If I have an overnight client every month, which is in the $20,000 range, that brings it down. Then I should have a range of five-figure parties between $10,000 and $15,000. If I have three of those, then I would only need to do so many $5,000 parties."

Some say it's tacky to talk about money so openly, but for Alice it's not only a point of pride. It's proof that you can be successful as a sex worker if you have a plan and the drive to make it a reality. "The reason why I talk about what I earn is because it's the only way that people will understand that legal sex work is a valid and real career."

THE REAL FAKE NEWS: EARLY PRIMARY GIVES IOWANS FALSE IMPRESSION THEY MATTER

DES MOINES, IA—Despite inclement weather, Iowa residents gather under traditional corn-thatched roofs for what's become a quadrennial political event as a Hajj of Presidential hopefuls sample local fare, talk policy solutions and pretend to give a fuck about anyone or anything from Iowa.

"The corn pudding's real good this year—the pandering too," says great patriot farmer Bill Smudders. "Marianne Williamson told me my deeply xenophobic concerns were valid and this horrible rash on my face was handsome. Now, I haven't a clue who she is, Oprah's sister maybe, but she's got my vote—unless a taller candidate talks to me."

Iowa became the first to hold caucuses in 1972, following the chaos and violence of the 1968 Democratic National Convention, in an effort to make the voting process more inclusive. "It was then that white people and corn of all varieties finally had a voice in the process," says Des Moines Register columnist Keith Mahgoon.

Nearly two dozen Democratic candidates crammed into retired school teacher Jennifer Strong's tiny kitchen to tell her she's absolutely right about that bitch Sally. "I said, you didn't hear it from me, but Sally is spoiling those children!" says Strong. "And they all nodded in agreement and told me they like me for the undeservedly large and antiquated role I play in Presidential politics. I've never felt more appreciated."

"Beto O'Rourke and Mayor Pete had a fistfight to see who could stand on my coffee table," says Maude Debeavers. "Beto won, of course—he considered my table nice enough to scuff with his $1,200 loafers. My grandfather made that table with his bare hands, and Beto totally ruined it. I've never felt so loved."

U.S. ECONOMY BOLSTERED BY GROWTH IN CONCENTRATION CAMP SECTOR

With the Dow stagnant and Trump's tariffs hitting consumers, there is one bright spot, according to market analysts. "We're seeing job growth, investments in infrastructure and sizable expenditures on goods like formula, diapers and baby coffins," notes Stephen Moore. "I get hard just thinking about it."

FATHER CRUSHED MÖTLEY CRÜE NOT RESONATING WITH SON

Speaking through tears, Baltimore area father Mosh Jones told reporters, "I'm worried my boy is lame." According to CDC Director Hassan Feelgood, Ph.D., nearly 24% of children are born lame, physically unable to rock the Crüe. "It's a real tragedy," says Dr. Feelgood. "Excuse me while I inject vodka into my veins."

MAN FUNDAMENTALLY MISUNDERSTANDS CONCEPT OF PHONE SEX

In an interview which no one asked him to give, distraught emergency room patient Alex Fanny Smithe explained his embarrassing colon X-ray to anyone who would listen. "You see," he said, "I can explain."

NYT TO BAN PROSE IN WAKE OF CONTROVERSY

In the wake of a Bret Stephens op-ed, which drew criticism from every literate person alive, the Times announced it will no longer publish anything that anyone may find objectionable. The move follows a similar decision regarding editorial cartoons. "We're getting back to the fundamentals of journalism," read the Times' press release, "with all the full-page ads that are fit to print."

TWITTER CRACKS DOWN ON CONTEXT

After years of failing to curb extremism and misinformation on its site, Twitter has taken steps to rid your timeline of anything unpleasant, regardless of intent. "They banned me!" says Sunny Cohn, author of the new book Hitler Was a Huge Cunt. "I was told my profile couldn't feature the words huge or cunt, because it may offend female midgets. And the whole title might offend Nazis."

BURRITO LAST HOPE FOR HUMANITY, SAYS MAN ON ANGEL DUST

According to Pew Research, religion is on the decline, but that's not stopping one highly intoxicated Iowa State Fair goer from sharing the gospel. "Behold! For the Lord God hath sent us his only begotten burrito!" says the visibly twitching farmer Bill Smudders. "Where am I?! Who are you people?! Burn anti-burrito infidels!"

DECRIM FOR THE WIN!

If anyone deserves a break these days, it’s got to be sex workers. Relentlessly marginalized, demonized and victimized, they are literally fighting for their lives. Yet amidst the onslaught, hope glimmers. And so it is with cautious optimism that we celebrate some of the encouraging developments in the fight to decriminalize sex work. First stop: New York.

In June, New York state legislators introduced the Stop Violence in the Sex Trades Act, which supporters describe as “the first statewide bill of its kind in the nation’s history.” Drafted in collaboration with Decrim NY, a sex worker advocacy group, the bill would amend prostitution law “so that consenting adults who trade sex, collaborate with or support sex working peers or patronize adult sex workers will not be criminalized.” Cautious hurray?

Said legislation, if passed, would maintain current laws on rape, human trafficking, assault, sexual harassment and battery. No one’s counting their eggs just yet, but it’s still progress—much like how senator and Democratic primary hopeful Kamala Harris, who previously endorsed the heinous SESTA/FOSTA law, is now saying she’s open to the possibility of decriminalization. Election posturing? Let’s hope not. (See below for a guide to where top candidates currently stand on SESTA/FOSTA and sex work decriminalization.)

As with all controversial legislation, obstacles and delays are a given. But champions of the bill are nonetheless encouraged, signaling a growing national conversation on the rights of sex workers and how criminalizing sex work only serves to perpetuate violence, poverty and, ironically, trafficking.

New York State Assembly member and chair for the health committee Richard Gottfried puts it rather succinctly: “Decriminalizing sex work between consenting adults is harm reduction. Sex workers would have better access to legal assistance, healthcare and rights as working people. Keeping sex work criminalized makes it harder to enforce laws against human trafficking and sex with minors.” Preach!

Do you live in New York state? Make your voice heard—speak up for sex workers. Google “New York State Assembly Member Directory”—lots of email addresses there, so take action now!

SEX WORK MATTERS

With 2020 fast approaching and impeachment still a long shot, the Democrats vying to take on Trump are piled higher than a zombie horde out of World War Z. But where are the candidates of substance, who stand for something other than self-interest and special interests?

These would-be pretenders to the throne better wake up, because dyed-in-the-wool Democrats are increasingly in favor of doing the D: Decriminalization...of sex work, that is. As reported by The Guardian, according to the nationwide survey Data for Progress 2019, a majority of Democratic voters support decriminalization: 56% to be specific, with only 17% opposed.

Whether or not voters follow through at the voting booth remains to be seen, but it’s safe to say that it would behoove candidates to consider these issues. And with that, we present Vice’s handy, dandy roundup of who stands where on the decrim spectrum:

Bernie Sanders: Supports SESTA/FOSTA? Yes. What about decriminalization? Unclear. For someone who purports to be pro-labor, Bernie is short on ideas and opinions when it comes to the rights of sex workers.

Elizabeth Warren: Supports SESTA/FOSTA? Yes. What about decriminalization? Unclear. She’s evasive, but the red flags are there—like her proposal to “crack down” on bank accounts linked to “traffickers.” Critics argue that under her proposal, sex workers could lose access to their income.

Kamala Harris: Supports SESTA/FOSTA? Yes. What about decriminalization? Yes. She helped lead the attack on Backpage, but has since softened her stance and is coming around on decriminalization.

Joe Biden: Supports SESTA/FOSTA? Unclear. What about decriminalization? Unclear. Uncle Joe remains tight-lipped, but let’s not forget that the Obama Administration was no friend of sex workers. (With Operation Choke Point in 2013 some porn performers allege their bank accounts were shut down.)

Beto O’Rourke: Supports SESTA/FOSTA? Yes. What about decriminalization? Unclear. For someone who loves jumping up on countertops and tables, Beto is somewhat less enthusiastic when it comes to decriminalization.

Mike Gravel: Supports SESTA/FOSTA? No. What about decriminalization? Yes! Hot dog, we have a wiener! “Sex workers are workers,” he tweeted last May. “They deserve the dignity and respect that every worker deserves. For too long we've denied them that. It's time to repeal SESTA/FOSTA and decriminalize sex work. Sex workers, not politicians, should lead the way in crafting sex work policy.”

Amy Klobuchar: Supports SESTA/FOSTA? Yes. What about decriminalization? Unclear. Remember, she not only voted for SESTA/FOSTA; she also sponsored the bill. Never forget.

Music is a big part of my life. My mom, dad and grandma exposed me to bands like Pink Floyd, Sister Hazel and The Beatles when I was a kid. I remember how my mom sang all the time, and we'd harmonize. Before I got into porn, I was a vocal coach, and I still do music projects. I produce and sing, and I used to be shy about showing people my work, but now I'm more comfortable with my art. I used to be shy about sex too, but I've come to realize that our bodies and our vulnerabilities are beautiful!

FREE SPEECH ON THE ROPES

The Establishment's War on the Internet

In George Orwell's dystopian nightmare novel, 1984, a tyrannical future government brainwashes its impoverished citizens with lies and propaganda dispensed by the Ministry of Truth. No dissent is tolerated. The population is united only in hatred against archenemy Eastasia in a fabricated war that never ends, justifying all the austerity, oppression and bloodshed. Orwell's prognosis was off by a few decades, but it did accurately outline the current shocking trajectory not of the old Soviet Union (his inspiration) but of the United States.

INTERVIEW BY TRAVIS KELLY
ILLUSTRATIONS BY AARON LANGE

After 18 years of continuous warfare with no discernible endgame, the military-industrial complex is starting to lose control of the narrative. Many Americans voted for Trump based on his promise to wind down the costly, futile war on terror. A majority of us favor diplomacy over military interventions. Dissenting voices on both the left and right are getting louder on the troublesome Wild West internet, and some have even taken to reading unfiltered foreign news sites, offering a more balanced, truthful perspective on the U.S. role in world affairs. Horrors!

Enter the U.S. Special Operations Command (USSOCOM) to save the day. In March 2018 the Command held a conference—"Is Truth a Commodity? Sovereignty in the Information Age"—laying out the blueprint for a virtual Ministry of Truth in the United States. In attendance were U.S. Special Forces officers, New York City police officials, Richard Haas (president of the uber-hawkish Council on Foreign Relations), representatives from 43 countries and executives from tech companies like Microsoft.

"Sovereignty," or governmental authority, according to the conference report, "faces greater challenges now than it ever has in the past," because the pernicious internet is "creating conflict and disruption" similar to how the printing press caused "decades, and arguably centuries, of conflict and disruption." Translation: Goddamn that punk Gutenberg! Before he disrupted the medieval status quo with subversive literacy, perfumed aristocrats and their mounted warlords could wage endless warfare with no dissent—plundering, murdering and enslaving the ignorant peasants and proles, who had no voice of their own. Ah yes, the good ole days, in the view of hawkish think tank the Atlantic Council, publisher of the conference's 21-page report. It continues: "Trust in Western society is experiencing a crisis.... Technology has democratized the ability for sub-state groups and individuals to broadcast a narrative with limited resources and virtually unlimited scope. In the past, the general public had limited sources of information, which were managed by professional gatekeepers." (In the good ole days, they wore clerical robes.) "Radical and extremist views" and "incorrect ideas" are flourishing, but simply "eliminating those individuals and organizations will not be sufficient to combat the narrative and may in fact help amplify it."

So, no gulags or lethal injection for antiwar activists—yet. We do still have that irksome First Amendment, spawn of Gutenberg's revolution. Instead, the best way to brainwash the now too-literate masses, according to these war hawks, is through the dominant tech giants—Facebook, Google, YouTube and Twitter—who "determine what people see and do not see." They all must "use a grading system akin to that used to rate the cleanliness of restaurants." The report even advocates that news sites "consider disabling" their comments section. No back talk from the peons, please.

The new shackles on the freewheeling internet have already been put in place, largely under the radar. The ostensible purpose: to combat the supposed epidemics of "fake news" and "hate speech" after the election of Donald Trump. In the quest to fight overhyped Russian electoral meddling, an organization named PropOrNot (propaganda or not) blacklisted dozens of American websites for allegedly carrying the Kremlin's water in 2016. Many if not most of them (like CommonDreams.org, Antiwar.com. Counterpunch.org and ZeroHedge.com) were well-respected left-wing or libertarian journals opposed to both the militarists and the financial plutocrats tyrannizing our nation. Guilt by association was generously applied here: Russia opposes our military adventurism and violations of international law, so anyone else who does so must be a Russian stooge and traitor!

In 2018 Facebook, faced with mounting pressure from legislators, caved and hired none other than the Atlantic Council—publisher of the Special Operations conference report—to vet its news feeds via its Digital Forensic Research Lab. The Atlantic Council is funded by NATO; repressive regimes like Saudi Arabia; branches of the U.S. military; oil giants like Chevron and ExxonMobil opposed to climate change mitigation; and a who's who of top defense contractors, including Lockheed-Martin, Raytheon, Northrup Grumman and General Electric. Just the disinterested folks you want controlling what we "see and do not see" on Facebook. One of the Atlantic Council's apparatchiks, Ben Nimmo, targeted several innocent people for deplatforming, including a British pensioner named Ian Shilling, who complained, "I have no Kremlin contacts whatsoever. I do not know any Russians. I have no contact with the Russian government or anything to do with them. I am an ordinary British citizen who happens to do research on the current neocon wars which are going on in Syria at this very moment." Facebook has been accused of the even more insidious "shadow banning"—you think your public posts are visible for all to see, but they've actually been censored, visible only to the user or the user's followers. It's as if the post office were secretly trashing some of your mail.

At the same time, there was a coordinated media strike against the notorious Alex Jones and his InfoWars operation out of Austin, Texas. His content was summarily banned by Apple and YouTube, followed by Facebook and Twitter. In conjunction with Instagram, Facebook also banned right-wing provocateurs Milo Yiannopolous, Paul Joseph Watson and Laura Loomer as "dangerous individuals and organizations." While those banned individuals might be offensive to some and are known to traffic in conspiracy theories, they are not guilty of "terrorist activity, organized hate, mass or serial murder, human trafficking, or organized violence or criminal activity"—Facebook's criteria for banishment. Many liberals reflexively rejoiced at this curtailing of free speech, but they should understand that hobbling the First Amendment is a very slippery slope indeed, as the ACLU has long understood.

In 1978, the ACLU defended a neo-Nazi group that wanted to march through Skokie, Illinois, a predominantly Jewish suburb of Chicago and in 2017 represented white supremacist Jason Kessler, who was denied a permit to protest in the infamous Charlottesville, North Carolina, "Unite the Right" rally—not because the ACLU is a racist organization supporting these views, but its sacred mission is to defend a core principle of free speech defined by the old saying: "I may disagree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." That principle is now being fatally undermined. As Alex Jones suggested after his purge, he will not be the last "heretic" to be consigned to oblivion.

His prediction was seconded by neocon hardliner Jamie Fly, who has beat the war drums for regime change in Iran and Syria and chaired the Foreign Policy Initiative, a reincarnation of the Project for a New American Century that lobbied hard for the current military quagmires. At a University of California-Santa Barbara conference, Fly allegedly confided to a faculty member: "We are just starting to push back. Just this last week Facebook began starting to take down sites. So this is just the beginning."

Earlier this year the Chinese-like purge picked up steam, with Facebook banning ZeroHedge.com, a leading dissident site critiquing American foreign policy, and suspending Telesur and VenezuelaAnalysis, two outlets promoting the official views of the beleaguered Venezuelan government against what some see as American attempts to trigger another military coup there. In May 2019 Diamond and Silk, two famous >> female African-American supporters of Donald Trump, were banned by Facebook. In October both Facebook and Twitter banned the websites AntiMedia.com, FreeThoughtProject.com and Cop Block for publishing "controversial" political articles about police brutality among other topics.

Following in the footsteps of discredited PropOrNot, a new organization birthed in August 2018, the Alliance for Securing Democracy (ASD), began wielding the same indiscriminate tar brush with its "Hamilton 68 Dashboard," purporting to track Russian bot activity on Twitter and other online venues. It promptly denounced The Intercept, the website run by Glenn Greenwald, one of the most scrupulous investigative journalists in the world, renowned for publishing Edward Snowden's revelations about unconstitutional NSA spying on American citizens. Yes, he too must be a covert Russkie agent. According to journalist Max Blumenthal, the ASD is "a collection of cranks, counterterror retreads, online harassers and paranoiacs operating with support from some of the most prominent figures operating within the American national security apparatus."

In April 2019 another blacklist of 515 "unreliable" sites appeared, composed by the Poynter Institute, a journalism school in Florida, using databases supplied by some of the "cranks and paranoiacs" cited above. Included were such reputable news and opinion sites as CommonDreams.org and ZeroHedge.com (again), DailyKos.com, DemocraticUnderground.-com, Rawstory.com, VeteransToday.com, WhoWhatWhy.org, OccupyDemocrats.com, BlacklistedNews.com, PaulCraigRoberts.org, Unz.com, DrudgeReport.com…and on and on. After howls of protests from all quarters, the list was suspended pending further revision.

Yet another media police organization was founded in 2019—NewsGuard, essentially a neocon mainstream media operation marketing a browser plug-in that will judge and rank media outlets on how "trustworthy" they are, which is to say how compliant with pro-establishment, pro-war narratives. NewsGuard's advisory board includes several veteran journalists, but its CEO, L. Gordon Crovitz, is the former publisher of The Wall Street Journal and alumnus of the Council on Foreign Relations, American Enterprise Institute and Heritage Foundation, all proponents of endless foreign warfare. Also on the advisory board are former Homeland Security director Tom Ridge, military/intelligence superhawk Michael Hayden, and Richard Stengel from the Obama Administration, who once pleaded for more "domestic propaganda" in America. NewsGuard plans to integrate its "services" with Facebook and Twitter, and even state governments, installing its Orwellian plug-in in public schools and libraries. All of Hawaii's public libraries are already using the plug-in. Their collateral service, BrandGuard, is designed to deprive unapproved news sites of online ad revenue by branding them as "unreliable." If the Pentagon itself were curating and censoring online news, it couldn't get much worse.

Not to be left out of the media censorship game is the biggest gorilla all, Google, which as of 2017 accounted for 90% of the world's online searches, 60% of online ad revenue and 50% of traffic to news/opinion sites and political blogs. Two years ago Google implemented new algorithms to douse the "fake news" grass fire and ended up nearly killing many of the aforementioned left and antiwar sites—the sites' traffic nosedived over a cliff. Truthdig.com, founded by longtime HUSTLER columnist Robert Scheer, suffered a 30% decline in traffic. The ACLU's site dropped by over 50%, and the World Socialist Web's site plunged by 70%. By mid-2019 the first several pages of Google's search results (the only ones anyone visits) are almost exclusively mainstream sources—CNN, New York Times, Washington Post, FOX, and the other major broadcasters and papers. Alternative, independent media sources without gargantuan budgets just never show up now, no matter how more timely, researched or relevant their articles. With a long history of collaboration with U.S. intelligence agencies, Google has become the unofficial gatekeeper of the World Wide Web.

While many rejoice that Alex Jones and the neo-Nazi Daily Stormer have been censored, it's painfully obvious that the war on fake news/hate speech has become a trojan horse for deplatforming hundreds of alternative media voices from both the left and right, with one common thread: opposition to the bloody neocon hijacking of our nation begun under George W. Bush. And it's not just in the U.S.—an analysis by Freedom House found countries across the globe are now following the oppressive Chinese model of internet censorship, using "fake news" as a pretext for clamping down on legitimate dissent. The study put the United States in fine company—with Egypt, Sri Lanka, Cambodia, Nigeria, the Philippines and Venezuela.

On CNN and FOX, and in the supremely "authoritative" New York Times and Washington Post, the same neocon liars who promised a cakewalk to find WMDs in Iraq are still given front-page squawk boxes—Bill Kristol, Max Boot, Jaimie Kirchick—despite being so deadly wrong so often. As Noam Chomsky told us long ago, manufacturing consent for unpopular policies is the real business of the mainstream media (MSM). Dissent will be tolerated, but it must be contained and marginalized to low-circulation media—else the peasants and proles might actually get their way for a change. Like funding universal healthcare instead a new nuclear arms race.

After Trump denounced the MSM as "fake news" for exposing the truth about his sordid life, the big boys have been cast as heroes trying to save the republic from an impulsive, ignorant demagogue. True to an extent, but this current reality shouldn't blind us to the many sins and prejudices of the MSM, extant long before Trump and long after he's gone. The New York Times trumpeting the Iraq WMD lie is just one among a long series of deceptions and whitewashes perpetrated by our hallowed Fourth Estate. Long ago the Times uncritically endorsed the Warren Commission report and still swears by it today despite overwhelming evidence indicating CIA involvement in the JFK assassination. In the 1990s, when San Jose Mercury News reporter Gary Webb exposed the CIA's complicity in the crack cocaine epidemic, the Times and Post quarantined the story—until Webb posted it on the Mercury News website and it went viral. Outraged at this new, democratic breach of the journalistic pecking order, the big boys crucified Webb—he was hounded out of a job and eventually committed suicide, despite his exposé being vindicated later. The Times and Post have never recanted or apologized for this great travesty. Ever since the CIA infiltrated the media with Operation Mockingbird in the 1950s, the agency and its conspiratorial crimes against democracy, here and abroad, have been sacred cows to the Times, Post and company.

In the 1970s, as Nixon and Kissinger sponsored genocidal, torture-practicing, fascist military regimes in Greece, Indonesia and all across South and Central America, the war crimes and gruesome realities were mostly hidden from the American public by a cooperative mainstream press. In the 1980s, to justify the savage Contra attacks on Nicaragua for electing socialist President Daniel Ortega, the MSM had to censor the U.N.'s studied judgment that the election was fair in order to brand him as dictator. Not much has changed since. To drum up support for a coup against President Maduro in Venezuela last May, CNN actually lied through its teeth, stating, "in elections in January… voters chose opposition leader Juan Guaidó." The election was actually held in May, and Guaidó did not even participate. That's as "fake news" as it gets.

But the worst memory hole dug by the MSM today is the full truth about how we've been stampeded into Cold War 2.0 and a new nuclear arms race. Nowhere is the following question answered or even posed: Why did meddling Putin favor Trump or Bernie Sanders in the election—anyone but Hillary? Because she was the biggest hawk in the race and vowed to continue a long series of aggressive American provocations against Russia, from our unilateral withdrawal from multiple arms treaties to fomenting a violent neo-Nazi coup in Ukraine. (The last time Nazis took power on Russia's borders, 27 million Russians perished in the worst holocaust of the 20th century.) But you will hear none of this context from the mouths of Jake Tapper, Rachel Maddow, Anderson Cooper and their ilk. No sense that Putin has perhaps been acting defensively. No, he must be demonized as the evil aggressor, the new enemy the military-industrial complex so desperately needs in order to justify its bloated existence. Russia is our Eastasia now, while the seeds of the virtual Ministry of Truth proposed by the Special Forces conference cited above are planted deep and growing.

We need a vital alternative media, uncensored and unmarginalized, to go where the mainstream media fears, or is too compromised, to tread. As journalist Caitlin Johnstone states, "In a corporatist system of government, corporate censorship is state censorship." If the private media tech giants are going to act as the world's media police, deciding what we "see and do not see," then they must be regulated by democratic input—the U.S. Congress, E.U. parliament, etc.—not star chambers composed of ex-generals, chickenhawks and defense industry profiteers. As Presidential candidate Pete Buttigieg and many others have suggested, it's time for Congress to regulate the digital commons to safeguard our paramount freedom: uninhibited free speech.

As Trump, Pompeo and Bolton plot to trigger another insane war with Iran, with neocons trying to hijack the Democratic Party and the MSM uncritically regurgitating Pentagon threat inflations again, we should heed the wisdom of this radical pacifist: "It is part of the general pattern of misguided policy that our country is now geared to an arms economy which was bred in an artificially induced psychosis of war hysteria and nurtured upon an incessant propaganda of fear.... Always there has been some terrible evil to gobble us up if we did not blindly rally behind it by furnishing the exorbitant sums demanded."—General Douglas MacArthur.

At 19, I was arrested for stripping naked on the football field of my former Catholic high school. It's super conservative in Nebraska. They wanted me to be a good little Catholic schoolgirl—instead, I was drinking and kissing girls. The nuns did not approve, but I didn't fucking care. I lost my virginity to a girl, and I've been a happy bisexual ever since. Kissing really gets me wet, and girls know how to kiss!" —Val

My favorite word is fuck. I love how it sounds. I love writing it. I love doing it. As a porn star, I get to fuck anyone in the industry and know they've been tested. Shooting scenes has given me a chance to explore my sexuality. I get really turned on by underwater sex, girl-on-girl action and amateur porn. And I love a good blowjob. But who doesn't?" —Penelope

DANNYGIRL

SELLING SEX

Over the last 12 years this Montreal-based maven has carved out a niche for herself as the go-to photographer for sex workers. Her clients swear she has the superpower to make anything sexy and all on a shoestring. Who needs expensive equipment when you have the God-given gift of making that ass pop?

HUSTLER: Why sex workers?
DANNYGIRL: Cut to me seven years old. You remember those tube neck scarves? I tried putting it on as a skirt because I'd flipped to the back of the old-school yellow pages and saw all the escort ads. I was obsessed! So it's something that I've always been connected to without even knowing what it was. Also, I saw Madonna's Blond Ambition Tour at 12, right at the peak of puberty, and I look back and realize I based my entire career off that.

You work solo?
Yes, I'm a perfectionist. I don't trust anyone else to not sleep and obsess about something until it's right.

I'm told you're a proud minimalist. How do you get so much out of so little?
I shoot with three 60-watt light bulbs! To this day I use a clip light, the kind you use to heat up an iguana tank, and two spots that cost a hundred bucks combined. But it's not about equipment. I shot a whole clothing line, literally holding a desk lamp. Now I can stand behind it and be proud. I'll shoot the shit out of you with three light bulbs.

The community clearly loves you. How did that evolve?
It's a word-of-mouth thing…and it's how I treat everybody. I get people being like, "Yeah, she's rad," and I think that's 90% of the business, you know? Anyone can take a photo, but to continue building relationships is where the story is. They thank me for their careers as much as I thank them for mine; it's very mutual. I'm paying my rent; I'm feeding my kid. Thank you. I want girls to fucking feel good. And that's what it comes down to: At the end of the day, I want you to feel good, and I want you to make money. The girls who come up to me and say, "Dude, do you know how much money I'm making right now?" That's all I want! The overnights, the fly-me-to-you's, the trips—that brings me tears!

How do you go about capturing sexy?
To shoot sexy you need to know what sexy is. And that has nothing to do with what your body looks like or how old you are or any of that shit. Every girl is sexy. There are no unsexy girls. I pride myself on not doing a ton of Photoshop—I think it does no service to anybody. You can see how many girls post my raw images, which I fucking love.

Is there a process? What happens when a client walks through your door?
I've always said that these shoots are like a date. It's very hard to walk into a room with somebody and take off all your clothes and then stand under bright lights. I make sure we talk about who her clients are now, if that's the client she wants, who she is as a person.

I always say, "Bring tons of stuff. Even if you're only shooting in two outfits, bring suitcases. We'll touch everything together, pick stuff up, go through it, try stuff on." We create a trusting dynamic. >>

INTERVIEW BY JOHN BLAYLOCK
PHOTOGRAPHY BY DANNYGIRL

I'm at least a decade older than most of them, and I'm a mom. A lot of these girls know me and feel safe with me. I'm like, "Own your body. Make that money." Sex work is not going away, it's part of our world, and I think it's important to normalize it. I think I make things really normal for these girls.

If I feel something is wrong, I say it. I've had girls from agencies, really young, and the guy is telling them they have to sleep with him or give him all their money or work for free. And I'll tell them, "No, girl, you don't have to fuck your agency owner. You can do this and be empowered and keep all the money for yourself."

You clearly have a knack for drawing out sensuality.
We're so lucky here in Montreal: The girls are every shape and size; they're every age; they're tattooed; some have hairy armpits—they're so diverse now! I think men have always wanted all of that, and it feels so exciting to be part of a real community.

Do you get a lot of shade for doing what you do? Or being successful at what you do?
Give me anything. I could make a plant sexy as fuck. I could light that ficus, and you'd wanna fuck it. But I've always done things my way. I never shot weddings and commercial shit. If you like what I do and you're onboard, cool, let's do this. Pardon my French, but I'm not sucking anyone's dick for a job. And that pisses a lot of people off. H

THE WILDE LIFE

PHOTOGRAPHY BY VICTOR LIGTHWORSHIP

Best date I've ever been on is when this guy cooked for me and we watched scary movies all night. Simple. I got to admit, I love horror flicks and cosplay, and I'm pretty good at special effects makeup.

"Growing up in Colorado, I went snowboarding, hiking, biking—there were so many hidden rivers, waterfalls and trails to explore. But my favorite activity was fucking. When I lost my virginity, it was like I had unlocked the key to pleasure. After that, I was always having sex. I soon learned that I am pretty darn good at giving blowjobs. My secret is that I enjoy them—when you're having fun, the guy knows, and it makes him feel good too—plus lots and lots of spit and eye contact, of course."

SWEET HONEY

HOLLY RANDALL PRODUCTIONS

Fun facts: 1) I absolutely love dogs—I have never met a dog that I didn't love right away. 2) I play the violin and the clarinet. You know that nerdy band girl that everyone ignored in high school? That was me! 3) I hate pineapple.

"I usually date musicians and artists who are smart, funny and creative. Looks and dick size aren't super important to me, but they're always a nice plus. Being held down and tossed around a bit in bed is a favorite, but I don't have sex all that often. I do masturbate every day, however. A lot of time it's on cam for work, and I absolutely love that I get paid to let people watch me enjoy myself. Sometimes I picture myself with a celebrity or just a random cute guy. But yeah, I jill off a lot! Nobody does me like me."

A beautiful young woman about to undergo a minor operation was lying on a gurney in a hospital hallway. A man in a white coat approached her, lifted up her sheet and visually examined her naked body. He walked away and conferred with another guy in a white coat. The second man approached the patient and performed the same examination.

When a third man in white approached her, the impatient beauty remarked, "These examinations are fine, but when are you going to start the operation?"

The man shrugged and said, "Your guess is as good as mine. We're just here to paint the halls."

Question: What's the difference between your wife and your Harley?

Answer: You might let your friends ride your wife.

Jeff watched in horror as his wife, Ally, sliced her tee shot through a window of a mansion adjacent to the golf course. "I warned you to be careful," Jeff sneered. "Now we'll have to go over there, apologize to the owner and find out how much that lousy drive is gonna cost us."

The couple, rolling their golf bags, trudged up to the mansion and knocked on the front door. A sonorous voice said, "Come on in!"

When Jeff and Ally stepped inside, they saw chunks of glass scattered all over the floor and a broken antique bottle lying on its side. A man reclining on the couch asked, "Are you the idiots who broke my window?"

"Uh, yes, we are," Jeff admitted. "My wife and I are sorry about that."

"No apology is necessary," the other man declared. "I want to thank you. My name is Raj. I'm a genie, and I had been trapped in that bottle you broke for a thousand years. Now that you've released me, I'm allowed to grant three wishes. I'll give each of you a wish, but if you don't mind, I'm going to keep the last one for myself."

"We don't mind!" Jeff exclaimed. "I'd like a million dollars a year for the rest of my life!"

"No problem," Raj assured him, "and I'll guarantee you a long, healthy life.

"So, young lady, what do you want?" Raj asked Ally.

She replied, "I'd like to own mansions in a dozen countries, complete with servants."

"Consider it done," Raj told her.

Jeff then asked, "What's your wish?"

Raj's eyes lit up. "Since I haven't been with a woman for a thousand years, I'd like to have sex with your wife."

Jeff looked at Ally and said, "Whaddaya think, honey? We'll both have a fortune and all those houses."

Ally responded, "Considering all that he's given us, it's the least I can do, dear."

Ally and Raj went off to the bedroom. After hours of nonstop sex, he rolled over and asked Ally, "How old are you and your husband?"

"Why, we're both 35," she gasped.

"No kidding," her lover muttered. "Thirty-five, and you both still believe in genies."

Soon after the airliner had reached its cruising altitude, the pilot announced, "Ladies and gentlemen, this is your captain. Thank you for flying with us today. The weather ahead is good, so we should have a smooth and pleasant flight," So sit back, relax and.... Omigod!"

There was complete silence for a few minutes. Then the pilot got back on the intercom: "Ladies and gentlemen, I'm very sorry if I scared you. While I was talking to you, a flight attendant accidentally spilled hot coffee on my lap. You should see the front of my pants!"

From the back of the plane a passenger yelled, "You should see the back of my pants!"

NIKKI GLASER

CUCK COMIC

Nikki Glaser's favorite topic is sex, so it's natural we hounded her for an interview in HUSTLER. And it's fair to say the comic gets around. She's hosted her own shows on MTV and Comedy Central, appeared in Jeff Ross and Dave Attell's Bumping Mics, scored roles in Amy Schumer's Trainwreck and I Feel Pretty and regularly tours performing stand-up. Plus, the comely comedian has made the rounds on the reality TV circuit in Dancing With the Stars, American Ninja Warrior and Last Comic Standing (twice!). The undeniably beautiful Ms. Glaser recently took the time to talk with us about her "weird vagina," promote her new Netflix special and explain that, yeah, sure, she's a "cuck."

INTERVIEW BY T.S. FARLEY
PHOTOGRAPHY BY MARIUS BUGGE

HUSTLER: You have a college degree in English literature. Was that part of your career plan toward becoming a stand-up?
NIKKI GLASER: Ha, yeah. I just chose English because I thought, Why not? I'm fluent! I literally chose that major because I wanted to do stand-up comedy and my parents wanted me to get a college degree, so I chose the path of least resistance. I thought, I know how to write a paper and can get away with not reading the books, just using SparkNotes and learning how to bullshit my way through an essay. I majored in bullshitting in college more than anything else.

> "SEX IS A THING YOU'LL HEAR ABOUT IF YOU WATCH ME ONSTAGE FOR MORE THAN FIVE MINUTES... THE SECOND I GET BORED WITH IT, I'LL STOP TALKING ABOUT IT. BUT I DON'T THINK I'LL EVER FIND IT BORING."

Were you a funny kid?
I had a dark sense of humor as a kid, but I wasn't the class clown. I would think of things to say all the time that I learned fairly early to not ever say, because people would look at me aghast, like, "Why did you just say that?" I got shamed a lot for my sense of humor. Then, when I first got into comedy, I was googling "female comedians," saw Sarah Silverman, and I was like, Oh wow, there is a place in comedy for a sense of humor like mine!

But there are even times now that I say things that are too dark, and people just bristle. For the most part I'm grateful I don't have a filter and that I do have such depressing, dark thoughts, because that's almost my brand now. It's a lot of honesty, and to be honest is to be dark. And now, with humanity's prospects, my stuff gets darker and darker. Like who has time for bullshit anymore? We don't have long to live.

How about an example of your too-dark comedy?
I have a joke about men who wear necklaces and how they always have a reason to justify it…because they know it looks so stupid! One of the reasons I give is, they're wearing a cross to convince themselves that they didn't really date-rape that girl in college, so I say, "Sure, Jesus has forgiven you…but Teresa might never."

Now I feel uncomfortable.

Yeah, it makes everyone uncomfortable because it's true, and now every guy is questioning everything they've ever done with a woman. They're like, "Was that indecent?" And I'm like, "Probably a little bit." I know a bunch of my guy friends are looking back on things that they did when drunk: "Could fingering her on the dance floor have ruined her life?" I'm like, "Maybe…but that's why it's easier to wear a cross around your neck, to convince yourself that you're really a good person."

I've always thought of you as very pretty, but I read that's not how you see yourself?

I call myself pretty when it comes to comedians, I guess [laughs]. But, no, I've always felt uglier than I wanted to be, so that's probably why I'm funny.

Do you think your looks have had any effect on your career?

When I was young, I was seen as the cute, young comic. I think I got opportunities because of that, but I don't think those opportunities would have led to anything if I hadn't had actual talent. I think it probably opened some doors to let people listen to me, yeah, but it wasn't like I said, "I'm gonna use my feminine wiles to become a famous comedian!" I think at this point I've proven myself enough that I can look like anything and still get laughs, but it hasn't always felt that way. I remember when I first started out in St. Louis, there was a comedian there—she was like the big girl on campus—and she hated me. She was very funny in her own right, and I looked up to her, but she was such a bully to me. She hated me so much because she thought I was getting things I didn't deserve, and I remember hearing that she said, "High school cheerleaders shouldn't be comedians." I was like, "Bitch, you don't know me! I have never even been close to being a high school cheerleader. I just learned how to do my makeup!"

You did a sex-themed talk show on Comedy Central called Not Safe With Nikki Glaser. Is that the one where you put your parents on a lie detector and peppered them with sex questions?

Yeah, that was one of the worst shoots I've had to do in terms of uncomfortability. The premise was hilarious. When my writers were like, "How about you put your parents on a lie detector and ask them about their sex life?" I don't really have many boundaries, so I was like, "Yeah, that sounds good." I have a close relationship with my parents, and they know my act, but I got across the table from my dad and had to ask if he'd ever heard me have sex at home—when he said, "Yes," that was one of the worst moments of my life. I nearly passed out, and I can't watch that episode now. And neither can my parents! They're haunted by it.

You were on Last Comic Standing a couple times?

I was on Season 4 and, I think, 6, and I made it to the semifinals each time. The first time I did it, I was still in college. People don't do this anymore, but I sat on the street to audition, and at first I got rejected. I did two minutes, and they said, "That was good, but how long have you been doing this?" I lied and said, "Two years," even though it had only been seven months, and they were like, "Come back in a couple years." Then, as I was walking offstage, one of the judges said to the other, "I really liked her," and the other was like, "I could be convinced." So I ran back onstage and did another joke, and they said, "See you tonight!'

Two questions about Dancing With the Stars: 1) Did you win? 2) Did you fall in love with or marry your dance partner?

I was voted off first, so not only did I not win, but I lost the most you could ever lose! And secondly, I didn't fall in love with my dance partner, but I understand how you could, because you're pretty much dry-humping someone five hours a day, seven days a week for a month. I had a partner named Gleb Savchenko, who's like a Russian supermodel. He's the hottest guy I've ever talked to in my entire life, the hottest person I've ever seen in person. I got to touch him so much, so it was like my Make-A-Wish.

You must have been bummed you didn't get to spend more time with him then?

I was devastated. Getting kicked off that show was one of the worst days of my career, because I loved it so much. It was the hardest thing I've ever done. I cried a lot, and I got injured, but I would kill to go back. I've pitched them a loser season over and over, but they're just not interested.

Wow, I figured you didn't care, like it was all just a lark?

That show sort of seems like a joke to everyone. I call it the jury duty of being a celebrity, because everyone ends up doing it. But in signing up, I had to face my biggest fear, which is dancing in public. Seriously, I think I would literally rather fuck onstage in front of a live audience than do the electric slide.

I was watching the Comedy Central roast of Bruce Willis, and you just savaged Martha Stewart. How do you look someone in the face and do that?

Well, you have no choice, really. If I just had to get up and start insulting Martha Stewart, that wouldn't be easy, but those jokes were tried-and-true and had been run in front of so many audiences. So once you get in that moment, you don't even think about her being there. You just do it.

And afterward? Did she say, "Haha, you're funny" or "Fuck you"?

She didn't really talk to me, so I think the message was clear. Cybill Shepherd came up to me afterward and gave me a huge hug. She was like, "You were amazing," but Martha Stewart didn't talk to me at all. But that's why I went so hard on her. I could sense that was her demeanor. She was kind of cold backstage, and the jokes about her were that she was a cold bitch. I thought, Maybe I'll meet her backstage and she'll be so nice and I'll feel bad, but that wasn't the case.

Now you're doing a radio show called You Up?

Yeah, it's my Sirius radio show, and then there's a podcast version that's like an abridged version of the radio show. The radio show is every day, and it's whatever I want to talk about that day, with whatever comedian friends I have in the studio. Sometimes it's really lighthearted, like joke, joke, joke. Then other times it's really emotional, like if I come in feeling depressed and I want to talk about being depressed. It's always vulnerable; it's always honest; it's always funny.

Do you consider yourself a dirty comic? A sex comedian?

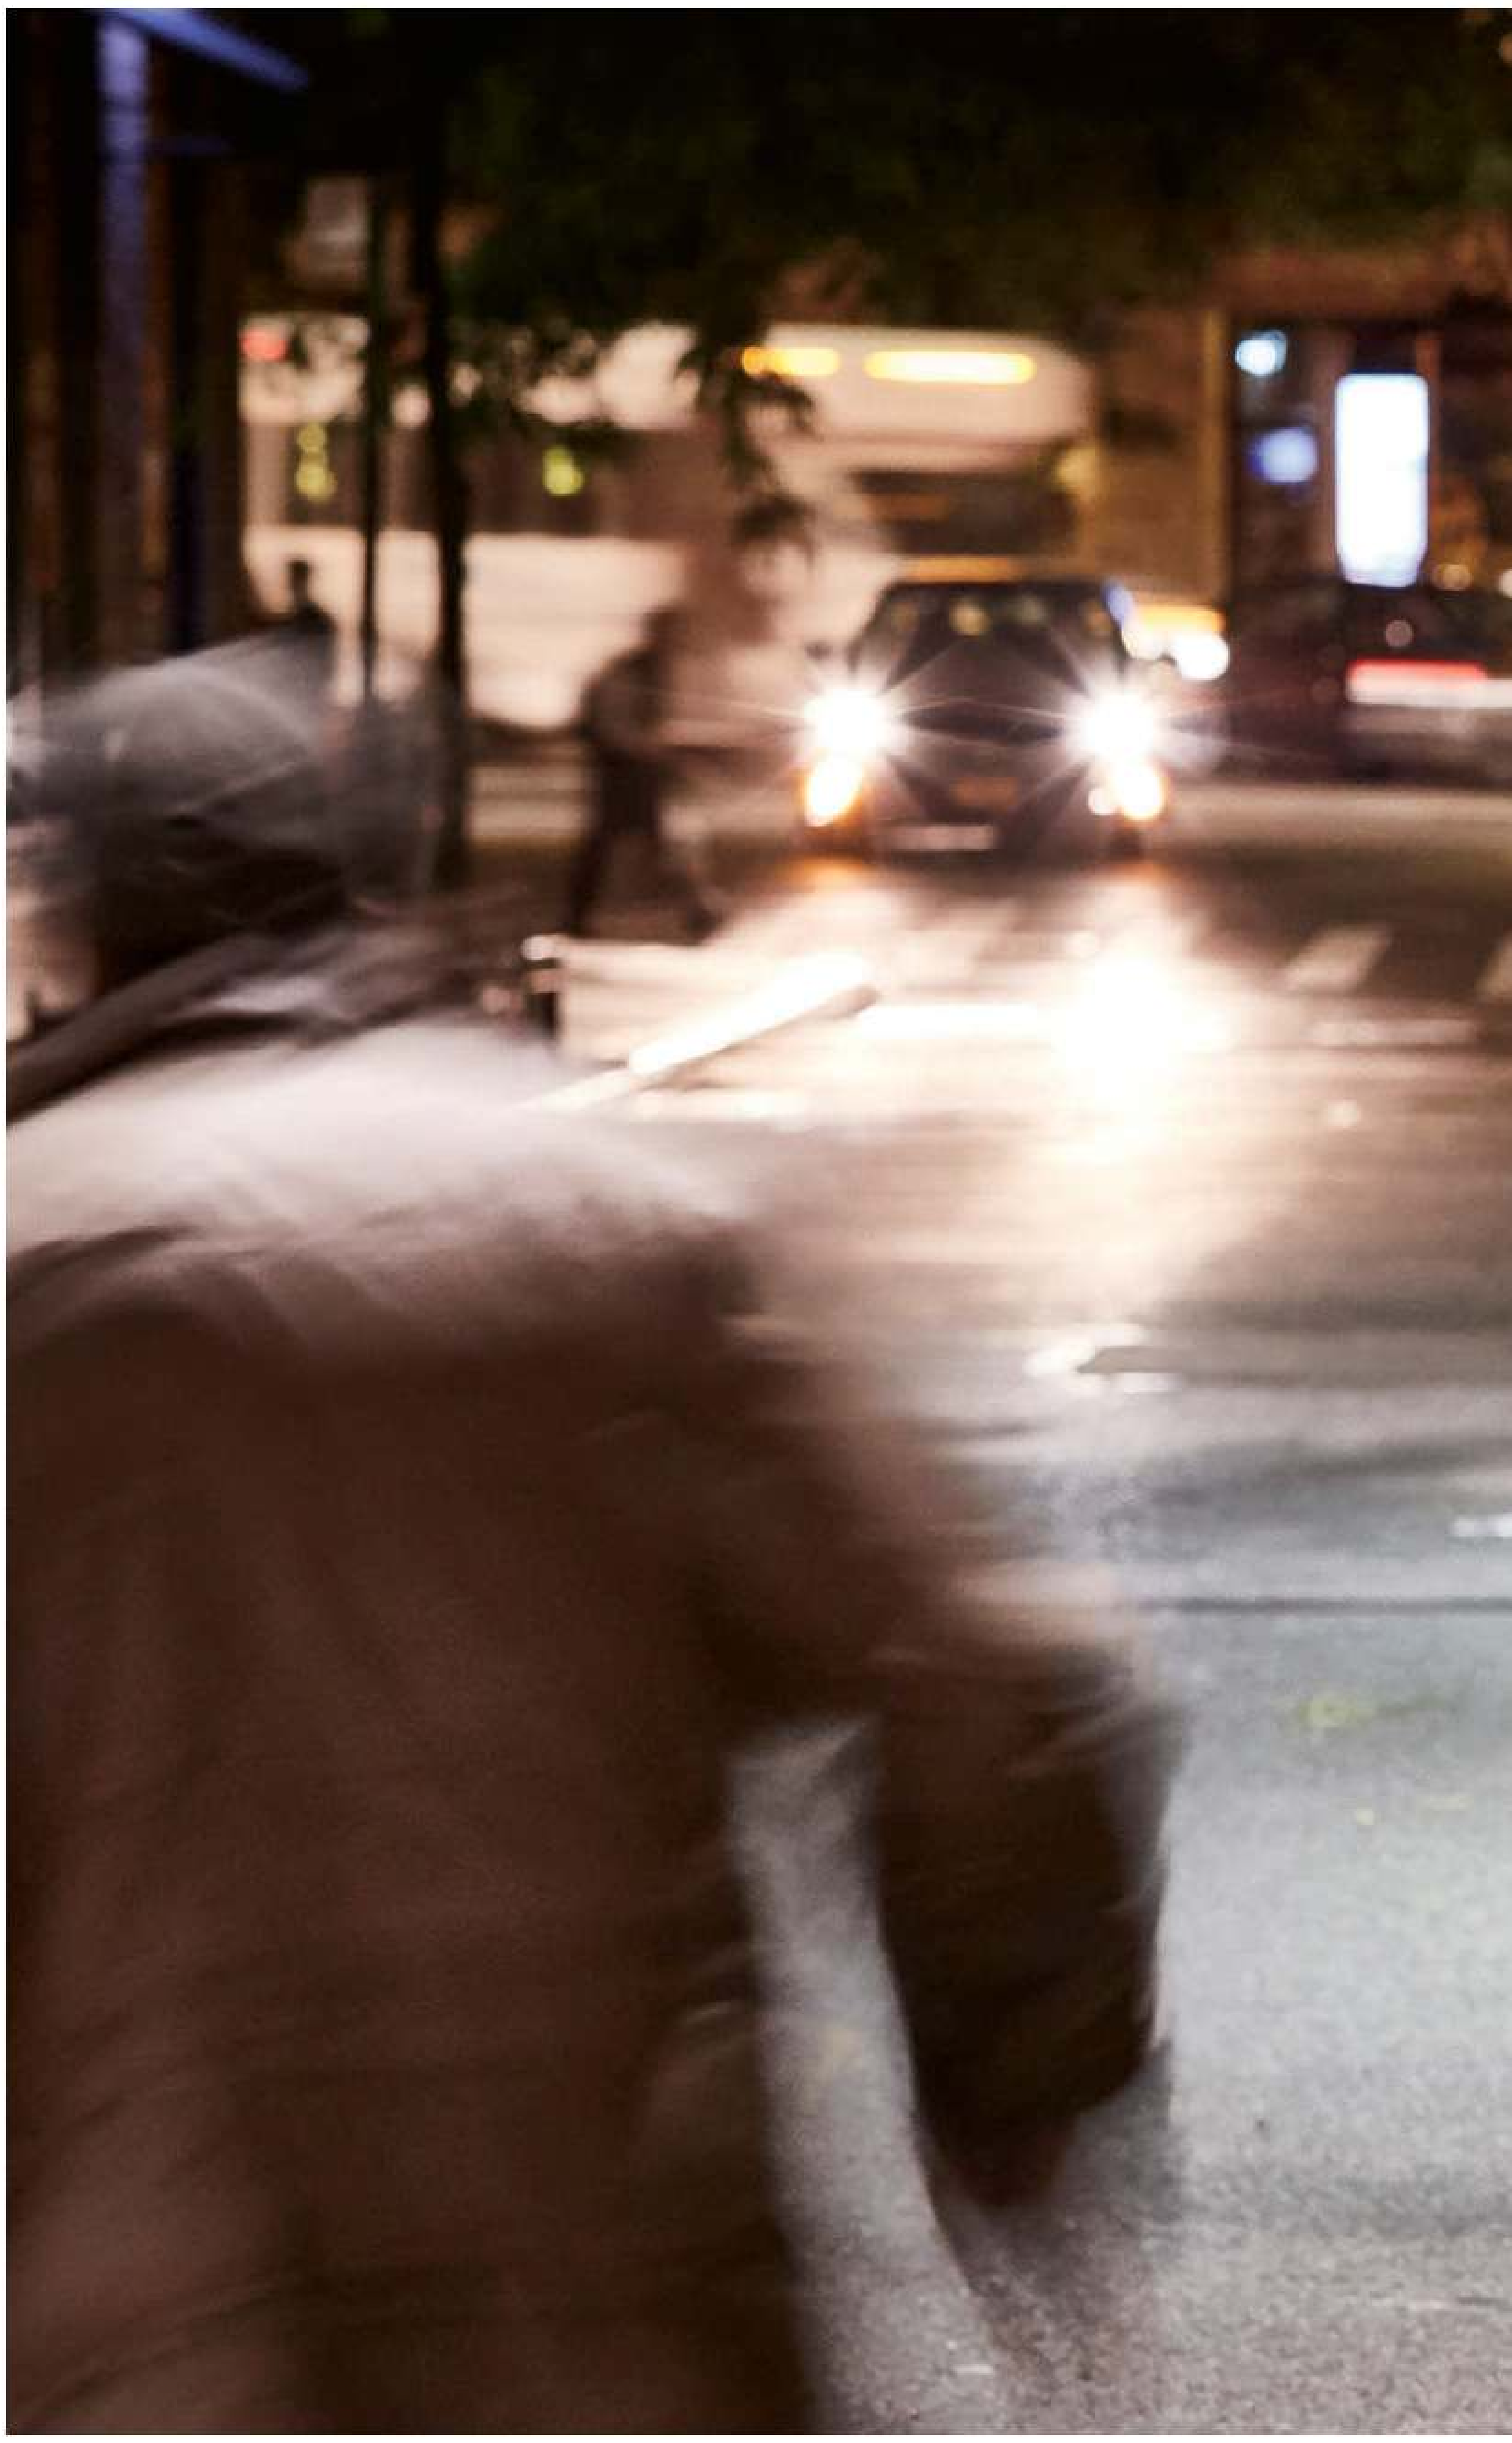
I get called a sex comedian a lot, and it is one of my favorite topics, so I'm not gonna deny that. >>

I just watched you on Conan talking about the speed of a man's ejaculate, so I was ready to argue if you denied it.
Sex is a thing you'll hear about if you watch me onstage for more than five minutes, yes. I'm waiting for the day to come when I don't feel like talking about sex, and the second I get bored with it, I'll stop talking about it. But I don't think I'll ever find it boring because it's so funny. Everything about sex is funny.

Tell me about your quote/unquote "weird vagina," which I also heard you discuss on Conan.
Every girl thinks she has a weird vagina, because men say mean things about our vaginas. We hear men compare our vaginas to sandwiches and different cutlets of meat, and we go, "Well, I must be disgusting too." Generally when a girl goes, "I don't like oral sex—I don't like you to go down on me," it's because she thinks her vagina is disgusting and she doesn't want your face near it to judge it. It's not because she doesn't like oral sex. Every girl likes to have her puss eaten! So when you guys talk bad about our vaginas, you're cock-blocking yourself!

That makes me feel terrible, but I'll say as an aside that I'm pretty sure we at HUSTLER love all vaginas.
The problem is in porn most vaginas are these little designer, perfect purses. You just don't see the full array of vaginas. Everything's Photoshopped, everything's sleek, and it's just not the case. You just don't see your vagina represented in porn as much if you're a girl with a vagina like mine, and most girls have a vagina like mine. It's the same for guys though. The only reason men hate their dicks is because they hear women talk about guys with small dicks, or they hear, "I need a big dick." I always say that we need to stop disparaging men's dicks because it makes everyone sad, and we all just want to be loved. But women have the same insecurities about their vaginas that men have about their penises.

Given that you are a sex comedian, I'd say it's time for our first ever celebrity sex quiz. You in?
I'm in.



Okay, some random things I've seen on Tinder lately. Have you ever heard the term heteroflexible?
Um, is that like bisexual?

I don't really know what it means. I was hoping you would tell me, because I thought you were some kind of sex expert.
That's the problem: I'm not an expert. I just pitched a show to Comedy Central about sex because I like to have it, but I don't have any kind of training or education.

In other words, you're not Dan Savage.
No, I'm not, and I don't claim to be, but some people think I am. Turns out if you have a TV show about sex, people think you're a doctor of some sort.

Doesn't matter—the quiz goes on: What is a sapiosexual?
Is that the one where you're interested in someone's spirit?

No, a sapiosexual is someone who is quote/unquote "turned on by intelligence."
[Audible gasp.] Ugh.

That's the perfect answer!
Yeah, all I have to say to that is ugh.

Next, have you ever heard of the term GGG?
Yeah, yeah, hold on, I got that one. Dan Savage was the one who coined that term. I know one of them is game.

I think it's good, gracious and game? Or maybe one of them is gullible?
I'm gonna look this up, because I have something to say about it. Um, okay, "Good, giving and game." Yeah, that's just like an ideal partner. He says one should strive to be good in bed, giving to one's partner and game to anything. Yeah, I think that's a key to sex.

> "I JUST PITCHED A SHOW TO COMEDY CENTRAL ABOUT SEX BECAUSE I LIKE TO HAVE IT."

Finally, you ever hear the acronym ENM?
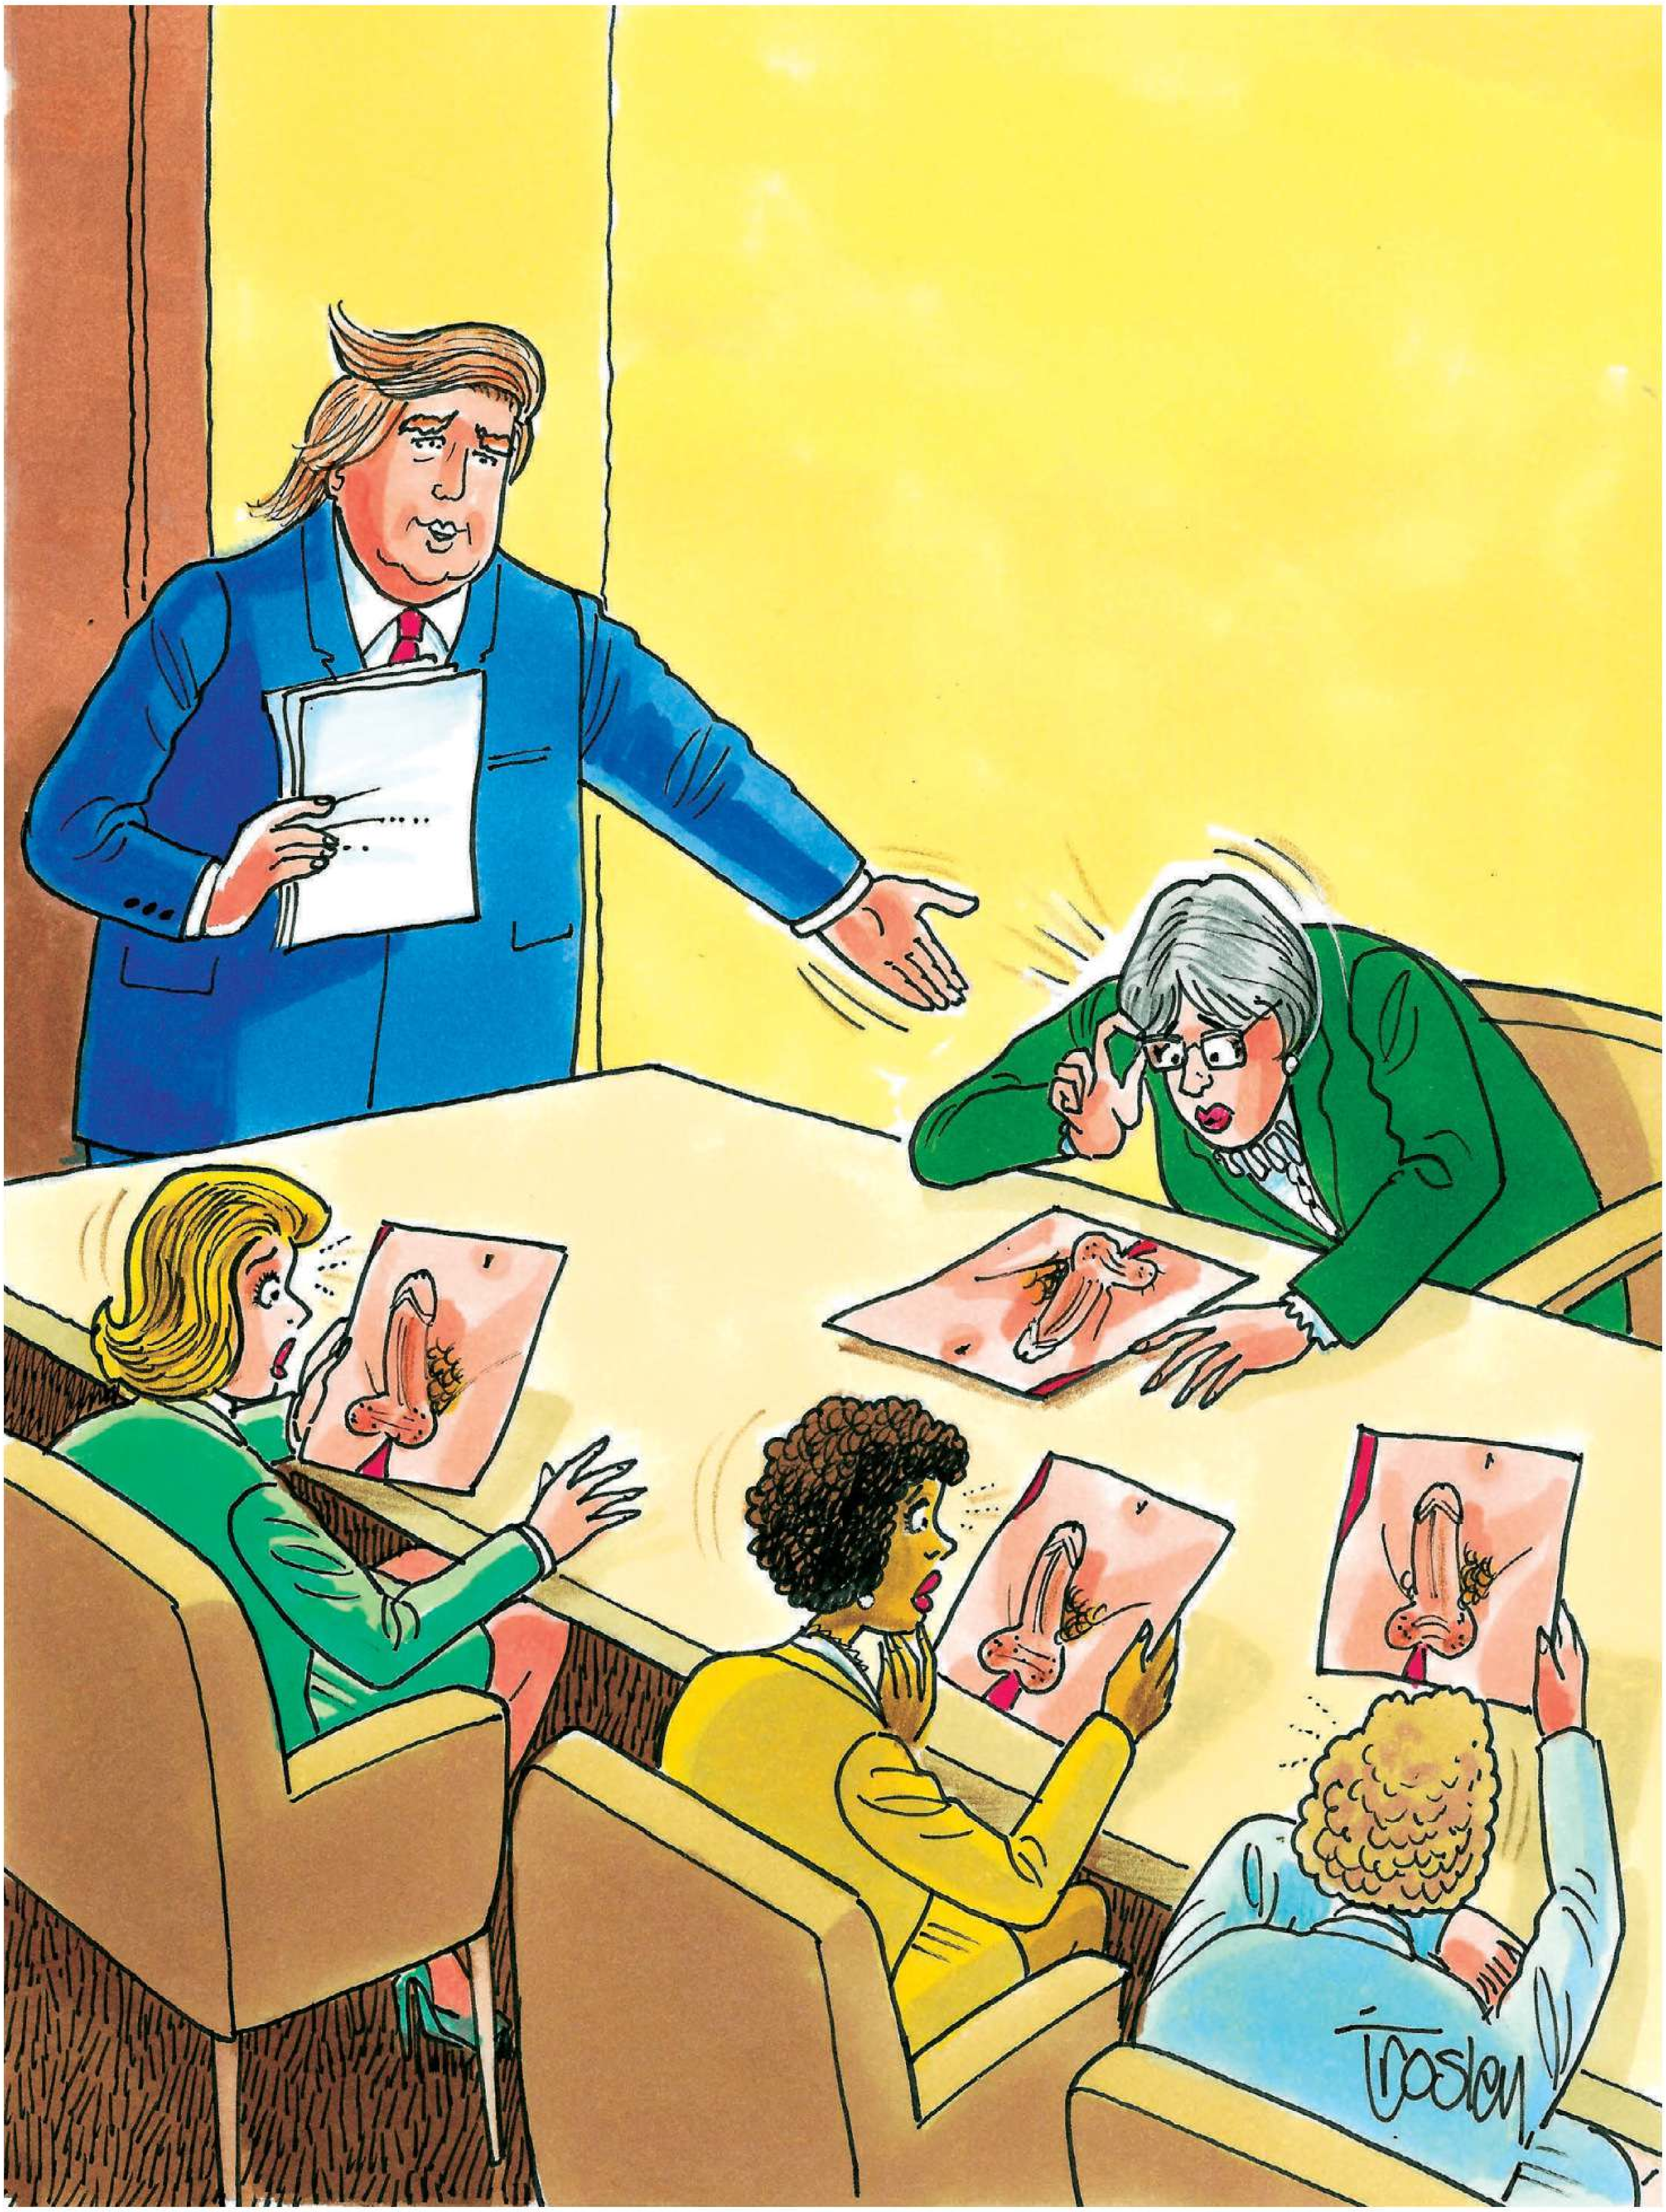
Uh, no, what is that?

It stands for ethical nonmonogamy. The reason I asked is because I thought I read you were into nonmonogamy?
Oh, yeah, I am a proponent of nonmonogamy. In the past, when my one boyfriend in particular hooked up with other women, I liked it. It demonstrates his value to me, that other women want him, but I also just like that women get to experience how good he was in bed. I'm not threatened because if he wanted to be with them, he could go be with them. If he had license enough to fuck them or hook up with them, he clearly would have license enough to leave me for them. I also know that when you give a guy you're dating the option to hook up with other women, suddenly they don't want to anymore. [Laughs.]

But he wasn't doing this behind your back, right?
No, he had my permission. Actually, I would often ask him to go do it.

Was it a two-way street? Did you run around too?
No, it wasn't a two-way street, because he wasn't into the same thing as me. He's not a cuck, like I am. I'm not a cuck in terms of wanting to being tied up in the corner, like "Oh, no, someone's fucking my boyfriend!" I just want to hear about it later. I don't need to know the girl's name or what she looks like—I want to hear about what they did. It's like a hot form of foreplay for me, so I don't need nonmonogamy. I don't want him to have a relationship with another woman, but catching a beej here and there doesn't bother me at all. H



"Oh, wait a minute! Pass those back…that's my hidden agenda."

Winning is sexy!

NAUGHTY ASIAN NEIGHBORS

HUSTLER VIDEO. DIRECTOR: B. SKOW. STARRING: SHARON LEE, JADE KUSH, BRENNA SPARKS, EMBER SNOW, QUINTON JAMES, DAMON DICE, JASON MOODY & BAMBINO.

"Good fences make good neighbors," Robert Frost wrote. This offering argues that easily accessible Asian hotties make better neighbors. In addition to its obvious fleshy delights, Naughty Asian Neighbors boasts robust doses of intrigue and humor, delivering a lighthearted romp about suburban shenanigans that plays out like an episode of Desperate Housewives plus full penetration. With her hefty milk mounds and wily ways, Sharon Lee plays a sexy manipulator with designs on the new white guy on the block. Lee sneaks into the dude's house to dig around and jills off with his electric toothbrush, treating her cavity to a pulsing orgasm. Naturally, he catches her in the act, sparking a sensual hookup that culminates when Lee's udders get splattered with jizz paste squeezed from his meat tube. Jade Kush has even more impressive chest pillows; as her scene opens, Kush is lounging in the tub, her magnificent tits bobbing above the suds like buoys. Kush sees her male neighbor spying on her bathtime. But instead of calling the cops on the Peeping Tom, she visits him like a tawny-skinned succubus as he slumbers next to his wife, tilting him toward infidelity with her heavy jugs, and hubby soon bombards the pearl harbor between her legs. When these Naughty Asian Neighbors come knocking, you'll want to open the door—and your fly. Order today by calling 800-763-8271 ext. 7651, or visiting HustlerStore.com. —Pico D. Ribibi

All-holes, no-poles endeavors like Axel Braun's Girlfest 2 can be a dicey proposition for the male viewer. On one lube-slathered hand, there's a gratifying lack of man-ass. On the other hand, with no cocks in the picture, it's more difficult to place one's self in the action. Axel Braun's Girlfest 2 tips the balance in its favor with artful, unobtrusive direction and a stable of (mostly) breathtaking talent. It also serves an educational purpose—if you manage to free up your hand for a minute, you might want to take notes while watching, because these labe-licking ladies offer a gash-course on how to get a woman off. Copper-topped vixen Lacy Lennon and classic Latina beauty Gina Valentina pair up for a scene that slowly unfolds like a roadmap to ecstasy. Lingering breast worship and lip-sucking kisses gradually accelerate into fervent crotch-grinding and passionate pussylicking, without the hyperbolized horniness that too often mars porn. Braun mostly stays out of the way, elegantly framing the intimate action, then stepping back and letting them do their thing, allowing the viewer to linger undistracted over some pretty magnificent sights. Such as Valentina's nipples jutting like traffic cones under Lennon's oral ministrations. Or Valentina tongue-scrubbing Lennon's bung like a determined maid scouring a shower drain. Amid all the muff-diving, there is the occasional dive in quality. A scene featuring Reagan Foxx and Jessica Jade is as cheap, garish and vulgar as a used-car salesman in a lime-green leisure suit. Luckily, the video quickly rights its course. For the most part, Girlfest 2 will leave you partying hard. —P.D.R.

ANAL CUTIES VOL. 8

HARDX. DIRECTOR: MASON. STARRING: ARIANA MARIE, GINA VALENTINA, CHLOE CHERRY, ELIZA JANE, MARKUS DUPREE, RAMON NOMAR & MICK BLUE.

The way to a man's heart is through his stomach, the old adage says. Anal Cuties Vol. 8 suggests an alternate aphorism, namely that the path to a woman's brain is through her asshole. Exotic brunette Gina Valentina kicks things off by bouncing on a trampoline and babbling frenetically about how excited she is about her impending colon-stuffing. Luckily, after the semi-annoying monologue, Valentina's sphincters prove to be as elastic and springy as the trampoline she's sodomized on, and cock firmly ensconced in cornhole, she abandons the inane yammering. Valentina's assigned prick-slinger finger-fucks her crap hatch like it owes her money, then drills for oil with his cock, pummeling her colon with a pugilist's fervor as she yelps and gasps while walloping her ass cheek like a speed bag at the gym. The scene comes to resemble an MMA match as Valentina is pinned down and anally dominated, choked, slapped and thrown around. I had to double-check that my video player wasn't on fast-forward, such was the manic pace of this fuck. Eliza Jane looks like a younger, more angelic Mariska Hargitay, minus the rack, as she works her hand and mouth on a fat cock, then straddles dick and stuffs her colon with the athleticism of a seasoned gymnast. By the end of it all, Jane's turd-cutter gapes like a wormhole. Anal Cuties Vol. 8 will likewise leave viewers' mouths agape—and their trousers packed with joy. —P.D.R.

BEAVER HUNT

EDITED BY MORGEN "TEX" HAGEN

VANESSA

"I can just give a man a sexy look, and he gets all nervous and stutters," says Vanessa, 25, a ride-share driver from Salem, Oregon. "It's kinda funny actually." The 5-foot-4 Beaver Stater continues, "I'm pretty goofy, and I don't sweat the small shit. I like to joke around, party hard and have lots of fun." Vanessa, a metal aficionada whose favorite bands are Black Sabbath and Red Fang, will gladly work up a sweat. "I go to the gym almost every day," she discloses, "and I really get into sex. I love being eaten out. I get sopping wet, and I squirt like crazy. And when it comes to fucking, I prefer doggy so I can be in control and comfortable all at once." Comfort and a bed aren't always a requisite. "Back when I was waitressing," Vanessa fesses up, "I had sex with my boyfriend in the cab of his pickup truck while going through a car wash. I was scared shitless that people would know what we were doing; plus I was afraid I'd be late for work. All in all, it was very exciting."

"My fantasy is to be naked as I drive around picking up my ride-share passengers. How's that for a lift?"

"I adore heavy metal music and doggy-style. I'm a headbanger and a headboard banger!"

SAMANTHA JONES

"Nudity should be celebrated and never censored," proclaims Samantha Jones, 29, an actress and vegan activist from Toronto, Canada. "It's an honor to be in your magazine. Thank you!" Samantha's favorite TV show is The Real Housewives of Toronto, but the 5-foot-9 bombshell seems worthy of her own reality series. "I'm bi and always up for hitting the swingers bars," she reveals. "Guys get to find out that I love giving slow, sensual BJs and squirting." Samantha is just getting her feet wet as a skin-mag model, but she's already a dedicated exhibitionist. "I've had sex in a pool at Canada's Wonderland [water park]," Samantha recalls. Fond of road trips, she'll have to travel vertically—and risk being busted—to fulfill her wildest pipe dream: "I want to be naked when I do the CN Tower's EdgeWalk." The view would be even more magnificent! [FYI: Attached to safety harnesses, daredevils can circle the tower on a narrow ledge almost 1,200 feet above the streets of Toronto.] —Photos by Anthony Randall

"My EdgeWalk fantasy may be hard to pull off. In the meantime I dream about scissoring a sexy lady until we're gushing on each other."

HARLEY LANE

"I'm definitely an exhibitionist," admits Harley Lane, 25, a former lifeguard from San Antonio, Texas. "The idea of being watched while I pleasure myself or a lover makes me even more sex-crazed!" The 5-foot-1 Lone Star Stater, who graced our July '17 roundup, is tickled pink to be back. "Having another opportunity is amazing," Harley raves. "I've been a HUSTLER and Beaver Hunt fan for a long time." She's also a fan of softball, camping, fishing, hiking, pool tournaments and country music. "I love Willie Nelson and the Zac Brown Band," Harley specifies, "and I need my dose of metal and rock too, especially Staind, Three Days Grace—back when Adam Gontier was still around—and Maroon 5." Halloween is approaching, but Harley isn't a horror-flick diehard. "I guess the ending almost immediately," she notes, "but The Nun kept me on the edge of my seat and guessing!" You won't find Harley in a convent. The "daring and adventurous" bi gal is a legal sex worker at northern Nevada's Moonlite BunnyRanch, and 69 is her specialty: "I love the challenge of trying to give head while I come. It's not easy! I want to throw my head back and moan, but I also want to see how close I can get my partner to coming. —Photos by Harry Connor

"I think it would be fun to sneak into a haunted house on Halloween and get it on!"

MY WIFE AND I TRIED SWINGING

PHOTOGRAPHY COURTESY
HUSTLER VIDEO

My wife talked me into it. She was a wild thing before we married, and she has always maintained that humans simply aren't meant for monogamy. It took her a while to coax me, and it was just one other couple that first time, then two and so on. But there's no turning back now. Watching your wife suck another man while you're fucking his is too hot for words. It's mind-blowing. To see for yourself, order My Wife and I Tried Swinging at 800-763-8271 ext. 7651 or visit HustlerStore.com.

Only teenage TINA and her big sister LAURA contain the amazing exclusive form that expands AFTER you receive your exclusive love doll. Even her sensuous lips, and deep throat mouth, powered by air suction, can open and close gently, thanks to her newly designed soft face. And best of all, you can order direct from the manufacturer, and save about ½ of what you would normally pay through a local mail order house. Dress her the way you want your girl to dress. HUSTLER CLASSIC
PHOTOGRAPHY BY CLIVE McLEAN

"Okay. Open your eyes," Destiny says while leading Terri into the beauty parlor.

Unsure how to react to the retro-styled salon, Terri asks, "Why did you make me come here?"

Destiny smiles excitedly, "I want to play dress-up with a living doll." The beautiful blonde grabs a fistful of Terri's locks and presses her face into oozing cooze. "First, I'll curl your hair. After that, I'll make your toes curl."
